

Bio-note: Rumbidzai Faith Masawi

Rumbidzai Faith Masawi is from the earlier cohorts of the rigorous cross- disciplinary Master's in Development Practice (MDP) program and MDP global network of multidisciplinary development practitioners, coordinated by the Earth Institute at Columbia University USA and conceptualised by the International Commission on Education for Sustainable Development and Millennium Promise. Her research interests lie in integrated approaches to sustainable development. To that effect she is drawn to the design of environmentally efficient production systems as well as equity and social inclusion in policy and governance. Currently she is a Research Fellow at TERI, where her set of cross-disciplinary competencies are focused on an active South-South cooperation through knowledge exchange on climate resilient green growth between India and the SADC region. She also coordinates the Special Course on Social Enterprise for Sustainable Development under the India Technical and Economic Cooperation (ITEC) and Special Commonwealth African Assistance Programmes. Before joining TERI she has served in the Ministry of Education- Government of Zimbabwe, The National Airline and Private Sector.
